Don't Tell the Bride – inside the world of cruise ship weddings

The cake got crushed, dinner was a self-service buffet and the groom resembled a corpse - the star of tonight's Don't Tell the Bride talks to Telegraph Travel about her wedding at sea

Kelly's wedding last year to her long-term boyfriend, Mark, was a catalogue of shocks and surprises.

From the initial phone call informing her that he'd applied to the BBC One series Don't Tell the Bride (where the groom arranges everything on his own, including the dress) to the point she was dropped off by mini bus at Rome's Civitavecchia cruise terminal and then walked down the aisle of the ship's theatre to see Mark on stage dressed as Frank Spencer serenading their guests to 80s pop music, the look on her face speaks volumes.

Bent double, with both hands flat on the wooden deck, I squeezed my eyes shut and focused on lowering my heels into the perfect "downwardfacing dog" yoga pose. As the instructor murmured encouragement I took a deep breath, sank deeper into the deck and opened my eyes.
